

Dr. Moonjung Jung is an Assistant Professor of Medicine, Oncology, and Genetic Medicine at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine. Dr. Jung graduated Summa Cum Laude from Ewha Womans University College of Medicine in Seoul, South Korea. She then completed the Internal Medicine residency training at Houston Methodist Hospital, Weill Cornell Medical College, Houston, TX and the Hematology and Medical Oncology fellowship training at National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, MD. In 2016, Dr. Jung joined the Rockefeller University as an Instructor in Clinical investigation. She received M.S. in Clinical Investigation from the Rockefeller University. In 2021, Dr. Jung joined the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine as faculty in the Division of Hematology. Dr. Jung is a physician-scientist with special interests in inherited bone marrow failure syndromes, DNA repair, and hematopoiesis.